Ask Your Doctor

If formal programs are not available in your area or do not appeal to you—ask your doctor for help in quitting. Your health care provider can assist you in developing a plan especially suited to your particular needs.

Studies have shown that the following five steps will help you quit and quit for good. You have the best chances of quitting if you use them together.

1. Get Ready

Set a date, get rid of ashtrays and tobacco products, review past attempts to quit, and once you quit don't take even one puff or dip!

2. Get Support

You have a better chance of success if you have help. You can get support from family, friends, coworkers, your health care provider, a counselor, or a support group (such as Nicotine Anonymous).

3. Learn New Skills and Behaviors

Distract yourself, change your routine, use stress reduction techniques, drink a lot of water, do abdominal breathing etc. In addition to formal classes, there are many self-help materials available at low or no cost and many online resources exist that can help.

4. Get and Use Medication

There are medications approved by the FDA that can help you: Nicotine replacement products (gum, patch, lozenge, nasal spray & inhaler) and non-nicotine products such as Welbutrin SR and Chantix. Ask your health care provider for advice and carefully read the package information. All of these medications will improve your chances of successfully quitting.

If you are pregnant, nursing, under age 18, smoking less than 10 cigarettes a day, or have a medical condition, talk to your health care provider before taking medications.

5. Prepare for Relapse

Most relapses occur within the first 3 months. Don't be discouraged—most people try several times before they finally quit. Typical difficult situations to watch out for: other smokers, drinking alcohol, weight gain, bad mood or depression. Talk to your health care provider if you have problems with any of these.
